Carstarphen took the oath of office as Camden's 50th chief-elected official in City history.

Scott Schrieber

Camden County Municipal Utilities Authority's Executive Director

Scott was appointed Camden County Municipal Utilities Authority's Executive Director in February 2020. CCMUA's Regional Wastewater Treatment System treats 50 million gallons of sewage discharged every day from properties in Camden County at its plant, the Delaware No. 1 Water Pollution Control Facility. Scott has committed his career to nonprofit and public service leadership. Prior to joining CCMUA, he served as the executive director of the Audubon Mutual Housing Corporation from 2006 through 2012, a nonprofit cooperative housing project in Audubon Park, where he focused on improving infrastructure and maintaining a strong financial position. In the eight years since joining CCMUA, Schrieber has served in several key positions, including as the planning administrator, grant administrator, budget officer and deputy executive director.

Commissioner Jeff Nash

Jeff Nash was first elected to the Camden County Board of Commissioners in 1991 and is the longest serving Commissioner in the county. Jeff is the Commissioner liaison to the Parks Department, Division of Environmental Affairs, Camden County Municipal Utilities Authority, and Pollution Control Finance Authority.

Since 2005, Jeff has served as liaison to the Department of Parks. In addition to the Parks Alive 2025 revitalization plan, Jeff also lead efforts to preserve critical open space and farmland across the county. Under Jeff's leadership, what began with a feasibility study in 2017, led to a over $4M investment in design and planning for the LINK trail, a 32-mile multi-purpose trail stretching from the Ben Franklin Bridge to Winslow. This year the US DOT awarded Camden County $19M in construction dollars to build the trail through Camden to Cooper River Park.

Another of Jeff's passions in government is the revitalization of Camden City. Most notable of accomplishments was his work with the North Camden community to demolish the Riverfront State Prison which, in turn, opened development and recreational opportunities on valuable waterfront property.

Most recently, Jeff was appointed as the CEO of the Rowan University Rutgers Camden Board of Governors which facilitates and advances the "Eds and Meds" opportunities in Camden. He is working with New Jersey Transit and South Jersey Transportation Authority to build a new rail system in Southern New Jersey known as the Gloucester Camden Line (GCL), this new and much needed rail line will transport riders from Rowan University in Glassboro to/from Camden City. This new transportation hub will also have direct connections with PATCO and the Riverline.
