Meg Malloy | Philadelphia Water Department

Meg Malloy is an Environmental Scientist with the Philadelphia Water Department (PWD), where she manages the Grounds and Surface Maintenance Teams responsible for maintaining PWD's Green Stormwater Infrastructure (GSI) across the city. Since 2014, she has helped build the department's GSI maintenance program from the ground up, meeting compliance goals annually and creating new career pathways for staff. Meg is passionate about developing programs that hire, train, and retain Philadelphians to improve stormwater management and enhance the city's functional landscapes. She holds degrees from Arcadia University and the University of Pennsylvania.
